Tabiona Named After Indian And Daughter

By DOROTHY O. REA
News Staff Writer

Tabiona is a dream-come-true for the lover of the outdoors. It reclines in its high mountain valley in Duchesne County and looks back to the day in 1905 when homesteaders drew lots for their property.

Or it stands tip-toe on its surrounding peaks to look ahead to the prosperity of untouched coal reserves and the activity which will herald construction of the Upper Colorado River Storage Project.

The homes of the 375 Tabionans nestle along the Duchesne River valley at the foot of Tabby Mountain. The mountain took its name from a revered Indian, the late Chief Tabby. The town added the name of the chief's daughter, Ona.

The giant tunnel that will carry water from Rock Creek to Strawberry Reservoir will travel within six miles of Tabiona. Already a big pipeline traverses the country as it carries crude oil from the Rangely oil fields to the Salt Lake refinery. Pumping station for the pipeline is located between Tabiona and Hanna, bringing new residents to the area.

Among the town's leaders are Mayor Claude L. Wagstaff, Bishop Bernell Turnbow and Clarence White.

Mr. White has brought fame to his community besides serving for many years as the mayor. He is a former president of the Utah Wildlife Assn. and has worked on a national scale for preservation of rare species of wildlife such as the Key deer of Florida. He gained a world's record for "bringing back alive" 28 mountain lions in one month from the Tabby Mountain area.

We traveled up the mountain with Mr. White. From our 9,000 foot vantage point we could see Tabiona's future drawn to the earth's scale. There's lumber and water aplenty and there are long acres of choice farmland and pasture for stockraising.

There's a plateau which stretches itself into a perfect location for a future airstrip, planned by the community. This will enable business men from western cities to fly into a literal paradise of fishing, hunting and camping.

Mr. White's description of the future airport was accented by the sight of deer scaling Tabby Mountain and posing for us on the skyline.

Mr. White located a TV signal on the mountain and brought the 6 1/4-mile line down over the rugged mountain contour so residents of Tabiona and Duchesne can enjoy the facility.

School is news in Tabiona. The whole high school student body is in the band. Last year's graduation class was all girls. This year there were a few boys and the potential is about seven boys for next year. Truly a land of milk and honey, Tabiona produces quantities of Grade A milk and it is as far as a bee's flight away from the honeyland of the Uintah Basin.

Bureau Supports Larger Of Parks

WASHINGTON—The Bureau of Budget favors the proposal to include Zion National Monument within Zion National Park. Rep. Henry A. Dixon reported.

Rep. Dixon has a bill in the House to effect the merger.

He quoted a letter from Assistant budget director Robert E. Merriam to the House Interior Committee, which said:

"If enacted, this bill would combine into a single administrative unit the Zion National Monument and Zion National Park."

BIG OIL LINE—The pumping station of Salt Lake Pipeline is between Hanna and Tabiona. The pipeline carries crude oil from Rangely, Colo., to the Salt Lake refinery.

HISTORY RECALLED—This monument tells of the first Utah Indian agency which was established one mile above Tabiona by Lt. Pardon Dodds who built a log cabin and fort there in 1867.

TELEVISION VIA MOUNTAIN—Clarence White shows a visitor the amplifiers that help bring the TV signal into Tabiona and Duchesne over a rugged six-mile stretch from top of Tabby Mountain.

TIMBER INDUSTRY—Logging and milling brings dollars to Tabiona from the surrounding mountains. Early settlers have left many log cabins to mark the time since 1905.

Utah Indians' Health Discussed By Watkins

News Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON—Progress on Indian health problems in Utah and the southwest were discussed by Sen. Arthur V. Watkins last week with Public Health Service field officers.

The Indian health experts were Dr. Henry W. Henshaw, Jr., of Albuquerque, N. M.; Dr. J. L. of Phoenix, and Dr. David R. L. Duncan of Window.

After the meeting Sen. Watkins said "We have some particularly difficult problems in the Utah sector which were thoroughly discussed."

"I am sure that by continuing the division of Indian health officials, state and local in Utah, and members of Utah medical profession can do much to foster rate of medical progress in Navajo country and on the Utah reservation."
